How to toggle field codes on or off in Word - Darn Office
What are field codes? Microsoft Word uses field codes as placeholders for data that might change in a document and for creating labels and form letters in mail-merge documents. When you use particular commands Word inserts field codes automatically. For example when you insert page numbers or a table of contents, cross-link to content like headers figure captions, etc. or even hyperlinks are field codes. Field codes are indicated by the curly brackets { and }. Examples:
